GENERAL REMARKS

The school functions as a well organized establishment. The classes are not too big and the staff is adequate. The Senior Classes work as one; the numbers would hardly warrant separate teachers.

The appearance, attitude and demeanour of the boys made a favorable impression. The daily class inspection and the bigger school assembly develop a becoming sense of self respect in the individual boy and foster the idea of corporate unity within the school.

A very fair knowledge of the book-work of Christian Doctrine was shown. A close analysis of the language and meanings of the prayers would be of great benefit. Too much emphasis cannot be laid on a thorough understanding of the significance of the Mass, the Sacraments and Prayer. The teacher should bring to the study of these subjects not only devotion but a knowledge and freshness derived from the reading of <sup>appropriate</sup> modern books.

Christian Politeness receives a measure of attention - rather small in some of the classes. Mental Arithmetic is quite weak. It does not receive the close and lively teaching it requires. Speed, accuracy and some power to reason will come only from constant practice, not in a routine fashion but marked by a stimulating variety.
